

“I don’t care”

Anna Yulsman

“I don’t care, why?” she asked with a stare
You know we have to share
This planet
“Fair” she now glared

How much longer will you wait?
Do you think this world is just fate
As if we can just wait until it’s too late

You say everything’s going to be okay
And still you don’t obey
The nature and way

You take everything for granted
In the sun you panted

In the deadly sun
You think its all-just fun
But you’re the one
Against the sun

Just wait and see
You’ll regret your actions
For one day
You will pay

Well time will tell
As you cast your wicked spell
Instead you will dwell
In your own demise

Note: This poem is about global warming mostly and how we need to start to realize how much it is impaction not only us but also our surroundings. Saying your going to do something is not enough it’s the action that counts!

Change

Change
Something that must happen
It may happen in time
But it is always constant
Sometimes beyond our power
Sometimes just within reach
Whatever it is, it is vital

Change is mandatory in order to grow and learn
It is the basis of the passage of time
Without it people would be incapable of transforming

For the change that is good
It is that, that will allow growth

But for the bad
Only we can be held accountable
It is us that controls it
A revolution is in our hands
Then as we adapt more change comes flying by us

It is our job to pick out the good and bad and make differences
If you cant do that then you really are not capable of change
Not capable of being a part of our community
Our community called earth

Without time to think
Yu have to react

It's happening now
So do something
Now

“The line it is drawn
The curse it is cast
The slow one now

Will later be fast
As the present now
Will later be past
The order is Rapidly fadin'.
And the first one now
Will later be last
For the times they are a-changin'." –bob Dylan

Note: This poem is about change. And how it happened fast and it's hard to handle, but that handling it has to happen in order to learn and grow.
