“Well, I read all the essays, every one. What good writers these young folks are. And I can see the effects of their having had excellent support and mentoring. Will you get to do another issue before the end of the school year? Amazing, heartwarming work. Thanks for sharing it!” Amanda, poet and publisher, Longmont

“I have started to read these remarkable articles and will likely read each of them. As Sundance once said, ‘Who are these guys?’ Are they really eighth graders? Am I missing something? Such mature themes so well handled. ...Their products must be very gratifying.” Bob, retired regional manager, Lakewood

“Was able to get the articles on line here at Hover - thanks for letting us know - everyone thinks it is great! Appreciate being asked to contribute!” Sincerely, Arlene Tuttle, A senior member who visits each month, Longmont

“Congratulations on getting the magazine online. May it acquire readers and flourish! I haven't time now to consult it; too much reading to do for my classes, a senior level American Romanticism and a graduate offering on Faulkner and other Southerners, but I'll consult it in time. Fred, Duquesne University Professor of English, Pittsburgh

“I just finished reading ‘Reach’ by Maddy Jalbert. All I could say was , WOW! I read it to my wife who said, too bad 8th graders can't run for President. This article is simply beautiful. It speaks such a profound truth. Unfortunately, I believe it is beyond the understanding of most ‘in the box’ adults. Simply amazing writing.” John, Environmental Engineering Equipment, Portland, OR

“Awesome!!!!!!,” Alice, currently at work on her family memoirs, Longmont

“Happy New Year! And good luck with another fine year of Health Quest Online. Good luck to all those ‘critters’ too!” Lindsay, author and editor, Littleton

“It's as impressive as ever. Congratulations!” Peg, Programming Coordinator for the Longmont Senior Center
